Karran® Color Disclaimer

- Most quartz sinks have defining line between the walls and the base of the bowl.
- Quartz crystals and colored resins in the walls of the sink compress differently under the heat and pressure of molding. The base of the bowl is exposed to greater compression and may result in a slight color difference between the base of the bowl and the walls.
- The difference in finish increases the refractive light contrast when light hits the surface.

A professional fabricator is recommended to do this undermount application in laminate.

This is something that is installed as tops are made - cannot be added once tops are installed on job site.

Thickness Chart

16 Gauge		↓ 1.5 mm (0.0595")
18 Gauge		↓ 1.2 mm (0.0480")
20 Gauge		↓ 0.9 mm (0.0355")
22 Gauge		↓ 0.7 mm (0.0291")

Choosing the Right Gauge

The best gauge for a stainless steel sink depends on your needs and budget.

If you are on a budget, a 20- or 22-gauge sink may be a good option.

A TIP ON TALL FAUCETS

If installing a tall faucet in a laminate top be aware that because of their height there is a higher chance of water splashing back and potentially leaking into the core of the top at the backside. If a tall faucet is desired for a laminate top, a postform style or coved backsplash in laminate is best. Extra care may be needed in drying the tops after use due to splashing.
